And Dublin: Reprinted for, and Sold by Thomas Wilkinson*, . . . [ca. 1777] £2/1/-
Wolfstieg, 29975 (viii) and Vibert. "Rare Books of Freemasonry," page 28, both show that no earlier edition was known to them. The United Grand Lodge Library Catalogue illustrate this title-page as the edition which is in the library but suggest the date of publication as circa 1760.
The work is virtually Pritchard's 'Masonry Dissected' (the running headlines being so designated), with the addition of the List of Lodges and the Songs. Wilkinson the Dublin Printer probably used the text of an edition of 'Masonry Dissected' previously put out by W. Nicoll, the introduction of his name in the imprint misleading readers into thinking that there was a London edition of Tubal-Kain.

- This work is noteworthy as propounding a new theory as to the origin of the "Ancients" or "Achoil" Masons. The "reprints" consist of "A Letter from the Grand Mistress of the Freemasons to George Faulkner, Printer," and "A Defence of Freemasonry, London, 1765." To these valuable reprints is added Sadler's defence of Laurence Dermott and the "Ancients."
