

- and Colonel Clive arrives in Bombay from England. 102
- The English join the Rájá of Sátará, and the Sirdars of the Deckan, against Angriá. 103
- Col. Clive, and Admiral Watson, join the Sátará troops to take the fort of Geria belonging to Angriá, who after a contest, promise to surrender the fort to the Rájá of Sátára. Some of his secret designs revealed to the English. 105
- Angriá refuses to surrender the fort to the Rájá of Sátára. Admiral Watson attacks him and takes the fort. Admiral Watson returns to Bombay and from thence proceeds to Madras. 106
- Captain Culliand proceeds to take the fort of Madras, and sends a force at night against the fort, but fails in his enterprise. 109
- The news of the advance of the French towards Chinápuli reaches Captain Culliand. He leaves Madras, with a limited number of men against the French. The French retreat from Chinápuli on hearing of the approach of Captain Culliand. 112
- Captain Culliand returns back to Madras, attacks its fort, and quits the place unsuccessful. 113
- The French take Vizagapatam, and the Marathá forces arrive in Arkát. The English are alarmed at their success. 114
- Four merchant vessels from England arrive with troops near Saint David's, the troops transferred on board of two men of war then on the road, and landed in Saint David's. The English men of war, on discovering eleven French vessels of war at a distance quit the place. 115
- Captain Culliand endeavours to take possession of the fort of Madras, but without success. 118
- The French take the fort of Chináput and Názam Muhammad, kilédár of the place is killed in action. 119
- Two English vessels of war arrive in India, one with Admiral Pocock for Saint David's, and the other with Admiral Stevens for Bombay. 121
- The French make preparation for the attack of Madras. Hyderally (Haider Alí) joins the French. They meet at Dendigul, but Hyder disapproving of the projects of the French returns to Seringapatam. 121
- Fourteen French vessels arrive near Saint David's, the two English men of war at the place, apprehending their capture, run the vessels on shore. 123
- The French vessels attack Admiral Pocock, and defeat him. 124

rian and English armies	74
Major Lawrence attacks the enemy with a limited number of Soldiers, and defeats them.	76
A mutiny breaks out in the enemy's Camp, and the Maisureans are blockaded in Chinapulí. Major Lawrence and Muhammad Alí Khàn proceed to Tanjur, leaving Captain Dalton in the rear.	80
Major Lawrence from Tanjur proceeds towards Chinapulí. Monsieur Buranier attempts to blockade the roads, but Major Lawrence defeats him, and arrives at Chinapulí.	83
Major Lawrence resolves to attack Monsieur Buranier. Both parties receive aid from their allies. The English make an advance at night and disperse the French.	84
Major Lawrence pursues the French, an engagement takes place in which Captain Kirkpatrick is wounded, but the French repulsed.	86
The Fort of Wolkandá taken by Major Lawrence from the French.	88
Monsieur Buranier receives aid from his allies, and proceeds towards Chinapulí to take its fort at night. He arrives near the walls of the fort of Arak where Lieut. Harrison attacks, and kills some of the French soldiers, and takes many prisoners.	90
Lieut. Harrison re-attacks the French, and kills a few and takes the rest prisoners.	92
Major Lawrence sends a detachment under an inexperienced officer for provisions they required in the British camp, and Monsieur Buranier attacks and kills them.	94
Captain Culliland proceeds with a force for provisions, and Monsieur Buranier attacks them, but repulsed.	97
The French proceed to take the fort of Tanjur, but are pursued by Major Lawrence. The French nevertheless on the way retake a religious place called Balmisrum from the English. A battle fought between the French and the English at Chaklapulam. The latter repulsed.	99
The English erect sheds for the shelter during the rains near a pagoda called Waríwarí. England and France conclude peace, and orders arrive from both powers to observe the same in India.	101
Mr. Saunders proceeds to England from Madras,

ences great troubles afterwards.	48
Sirdars Mánakjí, Abdul Wahábkhán Muráru Ráo, and Amir Al-Jaish Maisur sieze Chandá Sáheb, and bring him before Major Lawrence. A variation in the statement of the Sirdars before Major Lawrence as to who apprehended Chandá Sáheb.	49
Abdul Wahab Khán and Muráru Ráo insist on Mánakjí delivering Chandá Arkátí up to them or threaten war. Amir Al-juish Maisur also makes a similar demand, but with a pecuniary offer. Mánakjí agitated by such demands puts Chandá Sáheb to death.	51
Monsieur Law and his troops taken prisoners by the English.	54
Rájá Saheb's accession to the Gadí, as successor to his father. Troops arrive from Madras under Major Kenneir to take the fort of Giugí and Monsieur Kergin sent by Monsieur Dupleix against Major Kenneir.	55
Muhammad Alí Khán aids the English	55
A battle between Major Kenneir and Monsieur Kergin; the latter repulsed, but on a second engagement the former wounded and defeated, and afterwards dies.	59
Monsieur Kergin, and his men, made prisoners by Major Lawrence.	61
Captain Clive takes the forts of Rublang and Changláput, and afterwards proceeds to England on account of ill health.	62
War with the English and the Raja of Maisur. Captain Dalton commands the expedition. The Rájá defeated and retreats to Serangáum, and the place plundered by the English.	64
Captain Dalton pursues the Rájá and attacks him at Serangáum. The Rájá makes his escape, retreats to Chinapulí, surrounds its fort, and prevents the issue of provisions from the place.	66
A French army proceeds against Tarivadí. Major Lawrence disperses it.	68
Major Lawrence receives assistance from Saint David's & pursues the enemy, they attack him on the road, and both parties retreat through fatigue.	70
Captain Dalton and Muhammad Alí Khán surrounded by the enemy. Major Lawrence proceeds to relieve them.	73
The French Officer Misal Aniskhan, and other Sirdars arrive in Chinapulí to assist the Maisur troops. An account of the killed and wounded in the Maisur-

An engagement between Captain Clive, and Rájá Sáheb. The latter defeated, and retreats towards Velur. Captain Kirkpatrick joins Captain Clive. They pursue Rájá Sáheb, and take the Fort of Timri. The Maráthás also join the English. . . .	21
Rájá Sáheb again prepares for an engagement, but the Maráthi Cavalry plunder his Camp, and throw him into confusion.	23
Rájá Sáheb proceeds towards Madras and Arkát, to plunder all his adversary's countries. Captain Clive pursues him, kills some of his troops, and returns to Saint David's.	26
Both the English and Chandá Sáheb receive aid from their Allies. The Maráthi inform Captain Gengen of their unsuccessful attempt to attack Chandá Sáheb, and Captain Gengen's answer on the subject. .	28
Major Lawrence arrives at Saint David's, from England, pursues Chandá Sáheb and takes Chiná Pulí.	30
Captain Clive proceeds towards Kulrun, and the French retreat on his approach.	31
The French army enters the English Camp at night, finds Captain Clive asleep, surprises the Soldiers. Captain Clive narrowly escapes from falling into the hands of the French.	32
The Fort of Atitur surrendered to Captain Dalton.	37
The Fort of Pachándah taken by Captains Clive and Dalton.	38
One of Chandá Sáheb's Sirdars, and his men, quit Chandá's service, and join the English. They agree, at the recommendation of the English, to serve under the Rájá of Maisur and Muhammad Alí Khán.	40
Chandá Sáheb, and his troops, encamp in Serungáum near a pagoda, and the French near the rivers Jambá and Krishna.	43
Monsieur Dutvel proceeds from Dolkanda to the Jambá and Krishna, and assembles all the French troops. Captain Clive arrives there, Monsieur Dutvel flies to Wolkanda, but is pursued by Captain Clive. Wolkanda taken by Captain Clive. Monsieur Dutvel and his troops surrender to the English.	44
Monsieur Law recommends Chandá Sáheb to contract friendship with one of Muhammad Alí Khán's Sirdars, for the purpose of securing a passage to the Jambá and Krishna, Chandá Sáheb effects it, through Mánakjí a Sirdar of Tanjur, but experi-

CONTENTS.

VOLUME III.

In praise of the Divine Providence.	2
In praise of the Prophets.	3
In praise of King George the Third, and stating the author's object in composing this Poem.	4
Dost Husen Khán Arkátí (alias Chandá Sáheb) elevated to authority through the support of the French, whose power is strengthened by his elevation. An army sent by the English under Cap. Gengen to aid Muhammad Alí Khán (the Názam of Arkát and Chinapatan) against Chandá Arkátí and the opposition experienced by Capt. Gengen on the roads previous to his arrival in Wolkandá.	5
Captain Gengen takes Wolkandá.	9
The Kiledár of Wolkanda receives aid from Chandá Sáheb to retake the place. An engagement takes place. Capt. Gengen defeated, and retreats towards Atátur Fort. Chandá Sáheb pursues him. Captain Dalton attacks Chandá Sáheb from the rear, according to instructions received from Captain Gengen. Chandá Sáheb still pursues Captain Gengen to Chinápulí.	12
Captain Gengen writes to Madras to Lieut. Clive to send a force against Chandá Sáheb. Lieut. Clive promoted to the rank of Captain and takes Arkát.	15
Intelligence of the movement of Captain Clive towards Arkát reaches Chandá Sáheb. He sends an army against Clive, but is defeated, and his troops desert Chandá Sáheb. He sends his son Rajá Sáheb against Clive. The French, and Ali Murtuzá Khán join Rajá Sáheb in the enterprize.	17